

January: Best of Goodreads

Read something that was nominated by readers like you on Goodreads. Fiction and nonfiction titles are welcome!

February: Reimagination

Read a favorite fairy tale or a retelling of a fable. We'll discuss their implications in modern literature and why we love them.

March: Historical Fiction

Step back in time and enter our world during a different period.

April: Poetry/Novels in Verse

Celebrate National Poetry Month and Library Week by reading some poetry or novels written in verse.

May: Geek Reads

Celebrate National Nerd Pride Day by reading something in the science fiction, fantasy, or paranormal genres.

June: Ripped From the Headlines

Read something from the true crime section (nonfiction 364) and tell us about a real life mystery that intrigued you.

July: A Universe of Stories

As part of this year's Summer Reading theme, read a book about space, astrology, astronauts, or even science fiction.

August: Back to School Classics

Read a classic that you have on your shelf and never read, loved and want to reread, or want to give another chance.

September: Banned Books

Someone somewhere thought these books were bad news. Read one and figure out why. Would you ban it?

October: Halloween

As one of the best decorating holidays EVER, read a book about witches, the supernatural, or the holiday itself.

November: Celebrating NC

Read a book by a North Carolina author. Choose someone as big as Nicholas Sparks or someone from the local author display.

December: It Happened in 2019

Celebrate the end of another literary year by reading a book that was published in 2019. All genres welcome!
